

KICHWA TEMBO

Maasai Mara Kenya

Thursday, March 8th

Here I am in total luxury on Safari in Masai Mara. I am staying at KICHWA TEMBO. It's one of these tented camps where everything is set up to look like you are on a safari one hundred years ago.

I flew in from Nairobi from Wilson Airport. There I decided I wanted to learn how to fly and come and work for the Kenyan Air Doctors. The little airport looked so cool with all the airplanes + helicopters.

As we took off + flew over Kenya it looked like such a beautiful country. The nature + valleys + hills were awesome and I could see myself flying over there one day in a small airplane.

We landed on a ground airstrip - ground as in no concrete, just savannah. There was an elephant in the distance flapping its ears and this was exactly how I imagined precolonial Africa to be like.

There were these jeeps there to meet us and to take us to the camp.

As I was on my own and there were all these other groups they grouped me with this other American girl who was also on her own. Her name was Jennifer + she lived in  to make it
