

Seems nice + friendly enough.

Anyway we got here + they took us to these ^{green} tents, overlooking the savannah. It is so beautiful here. The tents a total + utter luxury. They were built for rich people to think they are on 'flour' + have all their ~~own~~ ^{own} comforts.

There are two large beds, electricity, w/ thing desk with mirror (all this in the front room and then a bathroom in the back room with a flushable toilet + hot shower + all mod cons.

They even have these glass bottles filled with home made shampoo, conditioner, ~~body~~ shower gel + hand + body lotion.

It is so cool + Helen would love it here. I miss her! We had wonderful lunch starting with tomato soup then fish + ox tail + veg + cheese + ~~chocolate~~ - yum.

Then there was a talk by 'a Maasai' about their culture + that was quite interesting.

In the afternoon they finally took us on safari after it had stopped raining. It was a bit slow to start with but then we came across a herd of buffalo which was kind of cool. Then we ran into a pride of lions. That was really awesome. These giant cats were just lying there in their natural habitat totally wild + we were only a few feet away. It was really amazing.

We also saw elephants + that was cool too. Then there was impala + Thompson's gazelles. Also this cool bird that makes a funny ~~braying~~ farting sound. + war thorns + ostriches, + bush babies.

The drive was really amazing + one of the best things I have ever done.

When we got back they did this Maasai dance for us + a little bit of singing and then we had supper. I had Zebra which was delicious + really tender + lobster - yum yum for my yum.
