

Friday 9th March.

My second day on safari and I am having such a cool time
I'm lying in a hammock just outside my tent and looking out onto the savannah and an  grassy garden with hundreds of differently coloured + beautiful KICHWA TEMBO butterflies every where.

Maasai Mara Kenya

That's the thing about ~~Kenya~~ + E. Africa as well (probably) that is so attractive to the white people. The climate is wonderful.
You can live on the coast, full of coral reefs + tropical beaches then you can go and stay up in the cooler altitudes and enjoy the beautiful landscape, go climbing Mt. Kenya or sail on Lake Victoria + go on safari in the beautiful national parks + savannahs.

When we were driving through the savannah today in our Land Rover + enjoying the views + the breeze it reminded me so much of the scene in Jurassic Park 2 when all the tanks are speeding 4x4 on this savannah with all the Dinos seen running around them. I would have loved to have been on at these white explorers + hunters in Africa in the beginning.
